

The Ile-de-France Region would like to build in 2013 in the frame of Comenius Regio European program a project with another European region in the field of Energy, biodiversity, water and waste management, food and health, an ecoresponsability to share between all the actors involved in the vocational high schools ;

The name of this project will be “ When ecoresponsability is invited to vocational high schools”

As all the Comenius Regio project this one will gather several vocational high schools (4-5 max schools involved in the project) and an informal education structure to introduce informal education methods ; it will allow several exchange practices and methods about ecology and education with the objective to build pedagogical sequences in these different fields and also to improve European mobility, European culture and identity among the pupils and to create the conditions of movement for the JAMO (disadvantaged young people) and dropped out pupils in view of their scholastic curriculum and their professional insertion by their participation in the project ; it will allow an european approach by showing the pupils the interest to work together and to exchange on European fields.

The purpose is to create links between high schools, to build a professional cooperation and to develop links between the two European regions.
